South Bend Tribune. T. Dax Walker, a young artist of our neighboring city, Goshen, is on his way home from Paris with honors that are not only creditable to the artist, but to the State. He was born at Goshen in 1869, the son of an Indiana soldier, who died early in his boy's life. His early work was in painting, but he turned to sculpture and another by carrying papers and doing chores about town. Young Walker was the local genius, making drawings and paintings that attracted considerable attention. His latest and most important work is "Saluting the Rising Sun," a canvas now on exhibition at the Crystal Palace, London. It was first shown at the Palais Royal, Paris, and after the exhibit at London closes the painting will be sent to Berlin. The artist is now in the act of saluting the sun, observed in old Babylon. In the competition which resulted in the award of the gold medal to young Walker, 11,000 paintings were submitted, 1,800 accepted, and the "Saluting" finally decided upon as the number one. The artist's home is the latter part of the present month.

Martinis, I closed into the fort.

At first, after forty minutes' shelling, they made do with a few shells, but then they came to 300 yards in front of my fort and left, but nearly every man was hit as he mounted the wall, and then they remained firing from behind the wall. I had a good lot had collected behind the wall 200 yards from my left. I crept out with ten or twelve men and fired at them for half an hour under the hedge, and drove them with loss by an attack on their right flank, and we beat back to our front with loss. Then at 11 A. M. they were firing from behind the hedge to our front with a weapon that rang out louder than their rifles. I crept out with a party of six and took cover in the ditch under the hedge, out to our front on our right up to within ten yards of the nearest of them. They opened fire and we held our fire until they were within ten yards of us. I had my double-barreled, sixteen-bore shotgun and six-bore and six-bore shotguns, and as they showed their heads over the wall they got buck-shot in their faces at twenty yards. Then my twelve rounds were fired and the Gurkhas also did considerable damage. We rushed the wall and I dropped one through the wall and a Gurkha was killed. We then went to the wall and I dropped one through the wall and a Gurkha was killed. We then went to the wall and I dropped one through the wall and a Gurkha was killed.
